CUBS FIGURE TO WIN TITLE FROM THE BOSTON RED SOX

Dope Proves Chicago Should Triumph in Series for Base Ball Title, But-Guard Your Bank Roll.

Doping a world series is not a difficult task. Compare the speed, hitting and fielding ability of the competing players, figure the effectiveness of the pitchers against the types of batsmen they will face, allow for the measure of craft and resourcefulness possessed by the directing heads of the rival clubs and take into account whatever advantages may be derived from the schedule. This done, the ultimate winner is so clearly indicated you feel a sort of pity for any individual so woefully uninformed as to wager real money on the club which figures prove hasn't got a chance. But, unless the new federal reserve banknotes mean nothing in your young life, don't bet. Doping a series is easy, but making the dope stand up is something else again.

NOTABLE UPSETS OCCURRED IN '06 AND '14.

There have been at least two notable instances within the memory of present-day fans where teams apparently hopelessly outclassed won the base ball title in most impressive fashion. Few "experts" conceded the White Sox of 1906 credit for ability to more than make it interesting for the swaggering Cubs in the series of that year. You recall what happened. An even more cut-and-dried affair was the clash of Connie Mack's famous machine with the Braves in 1914. So powerful was the Athletic array the critics figured Boston would be lucky to win one game. But the meteoric Braves not only routed the Philadelphia stars, but they took four straight games, the only time this feat ever has been accomplished in world series

No Difference in Class

Supporters of the Red Sox are anking heavily on the element of class. They contend, and rightly, that for several years the standard of play in the American League has been higher than that produced in the parent organization. Many even will be influenced by the fact that no Boston team ever has failed to win a championship series in which it was en-gaged. But while the comparative su-periority of Ban Johnson's circuit over the National League is admitted, this the National League is admitted, this margin of difference never was smaller than this season. Both wheels have suffered heavily in the loss of capable players, through the army draft, enlistments and desertions to bullet-proof jobs in steel league and ship-yards. The result has been the placing of the two big leagues on a more nearly even footing as far as the ar-tistic quality of the sport is concerned, has been the case since the American League first gained ascendancy der its rival. There is more of the bush aspect about both contending lubs than there has been for years ack. In the 1918 series where is little ifference in class to figure on.

No great amount of wagering on the series is being done. What few bets have been recorded show Boston ruling favorite, in the east, at least, at odds of 10 to 9. Barring accidents are favored by the schedule. Playing prove an immense advantage to the Cubs. Boston's record this season is conclusive in showing it is not a good road club. The Sox have done most of their winning at Fenway Park, their showing abroad being your conditions. the first three games at ho cago gardeners also have a higher fielding percentage than those of Boston. In fielding averages the American Leaguers' inner works alone excels, but it has been weak all season at one spot—third base. No less than four players—McInnis, Schang, Cochran and Coffey—have been used there, and none with much success. The Cubs, on the other hand, are not weak in any one place. They have played together longer and are better balanced in every respect than the Sox. Everett Scott is brilliant at short for the Sox, but the Cubs have in Hollocher a youngster who has been the fielding sensation of the National League and who is hitting more than 100 points above Scott, the latter's mark being 216, while Hollocher boasts a record of .318. Pick, at second, and Merkle, at first, for the Cubs both are batting at more than a .300 cago gardeners also have a higher field-

All World Series Contests

Games of the series for the base ball championship of the world, starting in Chicago next Wednesday, will be shown by the electric scoreboard on the 11th street side of The Star building. Every play on the field will be reproduced almost invited to witness the contests depicted in this graphic manner. Owing to the order of the government for the coaservation of white paper the issuance of extra editions of The Star after the games will be dispensed with this year. The contests will be fully covered in the regular editions of The Star by its news services, with supplementary descriptive comsupplementary descriptive com-ment by Denman Thompson, sporting editor, who will attend all the games.

clip, while neither the veteran Shean for McInnis of the Sox is near the charmed circle. No great amount of wagering on the series is being done. What few bets have been recorded show Boston ruling favorite, in the east, at least, at odds of 10 to 9. Barring accidents or some unforeseen complications, even money should prevail by the time the games get under way, with the probabilities good that the Cubs will rule favorites in Chicago.

Dope Favors the Cubs

Cold calculation indicates the National League entry should win—for many reasons. In the first place, they are favored by the schedule. Playing Hooper is a star outfielder and a great

Mays, Sox' Greatest Hope

It is likely the Sox will have to deshowing abroad being very ordinary. It is likely the sox will have to deaffect them adversely, they are going to have a tough time of it in Chicago. for the Windy City fans are veritable wolves. Their treatment of the Giants in the series with the White Sox last fall offered convincing testi- and at bat, but the hurling burden mony.

Then there is the pitching. It gencerally is agreed that box work will decide the approaching series. Good as is the Boston staff it is overshadowed by Chicago's. In Vaughn and Tyler the Cubs have two of the greatest left-handers in the game today. Tyler the Cubs have two of the greatest left-handers in the game today, and it is common knowledge the Red Sox are lamentably weak against good southpaw pitching. Ruth, Strunk, Hooper and Schang, the sluggers of the Hub brigade, all hit from the first base side of the plate. As for right-handers, the Cubs have in Hendrix a pitcher possessed of a far better record than any of the Boston hurlers. He even tops his illustrious fork-handed mates in the matter of games won and lost, with twenty victories and six defeats.

To handle Chicago's crack mound corps the Cubs have in Bill Killefer on the Sox staff. But he is young and may be affected by the importance of the occasion should he be started. The wisdom of using a competent critics, including Tris Speaker, really is the best pitcher on the Sox staff. But he is young and may be affected by the importance of the occasion should he be started. less than a genius. His greatest asset is his ability to get the maximum of work out of his men with the minimum of friction. It is Mitchell who now is given chief credit for the re- Timely Hitting by Tobin, Sisler markable feat of the Braves in 1914. when they came from last place in midsummer to win a pennant and then topped it off by annihilating the Mackmen in the world series. Mitchell, that year was coach of the Braves, who were managed by George Stallings. The latter should know the capabilities of Mitchell, if any one should. Of the Cubs' pilot Stallings

"The manager who knows just when a pitcher is weakening and just when to derrick him, the manager can sense the moment for a pinch hitter, the manager who can inspire his men and keep them fighting and on the jump—that's the manager who wins. And such a manager is Fred Mitchell. If the world series resolves itself into a battle of managerial wits—which so often it does— I think Mitchell will win." Yes, doping a world series is easy. The Cubs should win. But—

Besides the athletic events, several other features are scheduled. Mass singing and a big parade are among the most interesting features. Big crowds usually attend the excursion, it probably being the most popular of all those that are held around Washington.

Washington.

Events for the athletic meet to be held September 14 by the Government Recreation League for government employes have been decided on. Women have about the same number of contests as men. Here are the events: 440-yard run, fat man's race for entrants over 200 pounds, 50 yards, standing broad jump, 100-yard dash, shot-put, 50-yard dash for men above the new draft age, forty-five years; 880-yard run, running broad jump, potato race, departmental relay.

For women—50-yard dash for girls under sixteen years, standing high jump, three-legged race, 50-yard dash for single women under seventeen years, ack race, 50-yard dash for married women, 220-yard run, obstacle race, departmental relay for women. Another event is to be a base ball toss for boys under sixteen women. Another event is to be a base ball toss for boys under sixteen years old.

The meet is to take place in the Central High School stadium and will begin at 2:30 o'clock.

Meets Either Tilden, or Kumagae for Championship Honors Next Tuesday.

FOREST HILLS, N. Y., August 31.— R. Lindley Murray, California tennis player, representing the Niagara Falls Tennis Club, won his way into the final round of the thirty-seventh annual turf court championship here today, and next Tuesday will meet either W. T. Tilden, jr., of Philadelphia, or Ichiiya Kumagae for titular onors. Murray won his place in the final by defeating S. Howard Voshell, national indoor champion, who entered from the Terrace Club of Brooklyn, 6—4, 6—3, 8—6. Kumagae advanced from the fifth ound to the semi-final at the expense of Lyle E. Mahan, winning at 4-6 3, 6-0, 6-1. The Japanese will ner will be bracketed with Murray conditions were far from favorable for fast play on the courts of the West Side Club this afternoon. A high and fitful wind blew out of a leaden sky and the heavy atmosphere was fairly saturated with moisture, making it difficult to hold racquets firmly or control the flight of the ball. The largest gallery of the week gathered for the two matches, however, and were rewarded by some spectacular play, especially in the Murray-Voshell match.

The indoor champion at times gave Murray some of the hardest opposition that the Californian has faced in his progress through the tournament to date. Murray, however, always held the advantage of his smashing service and ability to hold the net at critical moments. the following day, weather permitting.

He did not elect to take a stand at the barrier frequently, playing from the service line much of the time with softer strokes than is his usual custom. He forced much of the play to Voshell's back hand and the latter was obliged to depend for the majority of his points to passing shots which clung closely to the side lines, interspersed with an occasional sharp cross court smash, which seldom was more than a foot or two beyond the net in its flight.

Kumagae's victory over Mahan was much more easily won. The tall New Yorker appeared utterly unable to control his strokes during the play and the Japanese was not any better in the initial set, which Mahan won He did not elect to take a stand at Yorker appeared utterly unable to control his strokes during the play and the Japanese was not any better in the initial set, which Mahan won at 6—4. The high wind and the greater footing power of the oriental proved a handicap which he could not overdome, despite repeated efforts to keady his game.

Kumagae on the other hand improved as the game progressed and was playing his usual high standard of tennis in the last two sets, when he ran through Mahan with the loss of but one game.

Earlier in the day H. L. Taylor of Brooklyn won the junior national championship by defeating J. Hennessey of Indianapolis at 6—4, 6—2, 6—2. Although both players are still very youthful, they showed a remarkable understanding of the finer points of the game, both in strokes and court strategy. Taylor appeared to be much more at home on the grass courts and his better racquet technic gave him the winning advantage.

The stopped, dived toward first and surretched at length, on the bound. It was too late for a throw to force Fournier at second, but Hyatt was retired with ease.

Shaw Shows Fine Form

J. Aloysius Shaw, the loudest grunting pitcher in captivity, did the mound work for the Nationals and did it well. There is some doubt whether J. Aloysius should have been sored on at all. That ninth-inning tally was traceable to a two-base wild heave by Lavan on Peck's grounder. Hannah's double down the left-field line scored him.

The brace of counters the visitors picked up in the third frame was manufactured after two hands had been retired by the strike-out route. Walters hit safely and Hummell walked, with Baker up and Walters

WINS FOR GRIFFS

Paves Way for 6-3 Defeat of Yanks and Stars With Judge in the Field.

SHAW HURLS GOOD GAME

BY DENMAN THOMPSON.

Thursday Slim Love was among those not present. He showed up yesterday with a good excuse and was forgiven. He had been over in the wilds of Jersey seeking productive employment. Judged by his performance on the mound against the Griffs before a meager half-holiday throng his present occupation is non-essential to the nth degree and he is to be congratulated on having landed a berth in a Hoboken shipyard.

If Love only had been considerate to enter immediately upon his new-found duties instead of returning to the Yanks to finish the season Huggins might have had a chance for his white alley in the Saturday battle. But one inning with Love in the box and the game was irretrievably lost. The ultimate tabulation was, Griffs, 6: Yanks, 3.

Roy Sanders, the youngster who relieved Love, pitched fairish ball, and save for one precarious session, the fifth, was not scored on. Only one of the two tallies garned in this session was earned. Thus it will be seen that had Sanders started the fray the verdict might have been reversed.

first a stride ahead of Derrill, Baker being held at third, where he died. Lavan also tricked Fournier into making a Griffithian double play possible in the fourth. By feinting for a grounder when Hannah lifted a fly to Milan he caused the Frenchman to dash for the plate and fall an easy victim to a two-ply killing.

Judge's contribution was but a trifle less spectacular. It was inserted in
